INTENSIVE SERVICE PROGRAMS

The LEARN Intensive Service Programs provides a wide array of training and program support designed to help students, teachers, parents and communities resolve instructional and behavioral problems. Our services are based in Applied Behavior Analysis - science that studies human behavior by measuring it and examining its connection to environmental events. Our teaching methodologies and clinical interventions are taken from peer-reviewed research, which are evidenced-based and empirically validated. This approach strengthens the educational services we offer to children, adolescents and young adults with disabilities while benefiting families and communities by reducing the possibility of escalated costs resulting from out-of-district (home) placements.
